And I took off walking . . .

I.

And I took off walking across a field which was green and brown which had cockleburrs I got one in my toe and dandelions
smiling brightly at the sun beautiful but more numerous than necessary I walked cautiously but steadily Until I came to the end of the earth, And still I kept on walking.
at eighteen miles a second I walked one month before I reached Mars that planet being some forty-eight million miles from my home
the month of course is only an approximate time an estimate one might say meaning that it is closer to the truth
than a day
or a week or a year but perhaps it is not very close itself the truth you know depends upon conditions

II.

There were fuzzy caterpillars two black stripes around a brown one Everywhere at the dying of the year And we held them in our hands watched delighted as they scrambled up our arms
And made them glass-jar houses With hole-punched tinfoil roofs and lots of leaves to eat and twigs to climb
We saw the way they built Their snug cocoons and did our best to save them until spring
But our care was never quite enough They always died during the winter sleep spring shook
the world awake but they slept on And yet as each year aged away We played in ever-fresh delight laughing at the sillies who didn't dare to touch them
I saw one crawling on the road today And stopped to watch it ripple by then wandered on did not look back again
I watched but did not touch it I do not hold caterpillars anymore and neither do I save them
in glass jars

III.

I am a stranger here
the twilight crept across our evening song the faces of my friends fled into shadows
as the strange sad tones fell dimly
through the gloom
I am a stranger everywhere the nighttime isolated each within the haunting melody
and lonely words which wrapped us in the mysteries that even friends don't share
I am a stranger here
among the faces
that I do not know that talk and smile
look away
say I don't know you what's your name but knowing still won't know

I am a stranger everywhere
I have not been there how can I belong when I have been nowhere beyond my people's world and everywhere
is much too wide to hold me in its care
I would go home from all the faces I can never know
to all the people I remember still except I think they've gone away perhaps they've saved my place
somewhere
But I'm a stranger there

IV.

On the mountainside nestles El Reparto, Its shacks crudely built, dimly lit, Painted not at all or in faded tones Of the ugliest blues and pinks I've seen.
Here live the illiterates, Whom I must teach.
sinceramente te felicito I am glad that you are doing something for the liberation of Nicaragua for if these people learn to read they will become conscious of many things which will prepare them for action later and being in Jinotega you will realize the poverty which exists in that town especially in the outskirts as in the rest of Nicaragua Whom I am powerless to teach;
From whom I will learn
The tragedy of their existence And my helpless distance from their world.
Why do you congratulate me, Marisol?

V.

Nicaragua needs someone like Jesus Christ the good man
the great teacher Whom they have crucified and in the universities the priests unravel intricate philosophies theologies heresies and confide that they no longer accept the things
our parents
held sacred
And the people revere this Christ and a myriad saints to whom they pray for rain for protection for the health of their little chickens
We need a Nicaraguan Christ, For Jesus Christ Himself sleeping on satin pillows in the elegant decay of forgotten cathedrals Ministered to the Jews, Who crucified Him.

VI.

What do You say, Jesus Christ?
Sepulchred in satin
Have You earned our adoration?
Did Your crucifiers Bed You in such splendor You forgot the Resurrection?
With what deception
You are sacrificed
Throughout the ages,
And how carefully we smooth Your funeral pillows!
We have crucified You, Jesus Christ;
We have laid You in an uncorrupted tomb Made sweet with rare perfumes and satins And mingled Your glorious words and deeds With the dust of our own pursuits.
Do You find comfort in this forgotten death, Apart from the struggles of the world,
Or will You awaken once again To preach the release of the captives Of this earth?

VII.

I am laughing
As the rain falls at home they always tell me that it might be nice if I would smile
more but here there is no problem for all the somber faces walking by my world remove whatever thought I had
For anything
But laughing.

VIII.

This is an impressionistic night.
The fog hangs broken-edged in the treetops fragilely hovering overhead lost in itself forgetting the stars which gleam mockingly through the open spaces caught in the leaves
night pale
against the grey-shadowed darkness of the sky
night pale
spring pale
new with a green that was gold only last week
entangled in the woven web of their whispering the leaves
night pale
spring pale
whispering endlessly
to the wind and the stars
And I walk on. . .

IX.

Tired of the questions they forever ask where will you go
what will you be
And the neat suggestion in their words perhaps a teacher or a nurse Fearful that time is running out for how long can I answer I don't know Someone stands before me
we have crucified You, Jesus Christ and sealed You safely in the tomb He whispers, "Follow Me" but that's too radical
what will you be
And blind I lay aside my longing for security to follow a path
that I do not know
But Jesus speaks gently again to me you know where I go and the way you know For I am the Way. . .

The cover is a lithographed reproduction of a silkscreen print I made in 1971. Eugene Stutzman

My poem, if it needs a title, can be called "Prelude." The three previously-written poems from which the sections were drawn belong to an unfinished collection of autobiographical poems, the first of which I wrote in the summer of 1967. I attempted, as far as possible, to create a poem fitting to the mood and intent of the Maple Leaf; the editors, in turn, gave me the right to decide finally what form the poem would take. Cathy Conrad Specifications—The 1972 edition of the Maple Leaf was printed by the offset process by Newsfoto Yearbooks, San Angelo, Texas. Basic type font was Univers Medium for the body copy and 21-CLC Futura Medium for headlines. The pages in nine-by-twelve-inch format were printed on eighty-pound coated opaque stock. The book has a Smyth binding. The cover was lithographed on white arco cover material using Primrose Yellow npc-1, Display Red npc-6, and Peacock Blue npc-16. The second color on the endsheets is Display Red npc-6.

was 1600 copies.
